AQUA LUNA

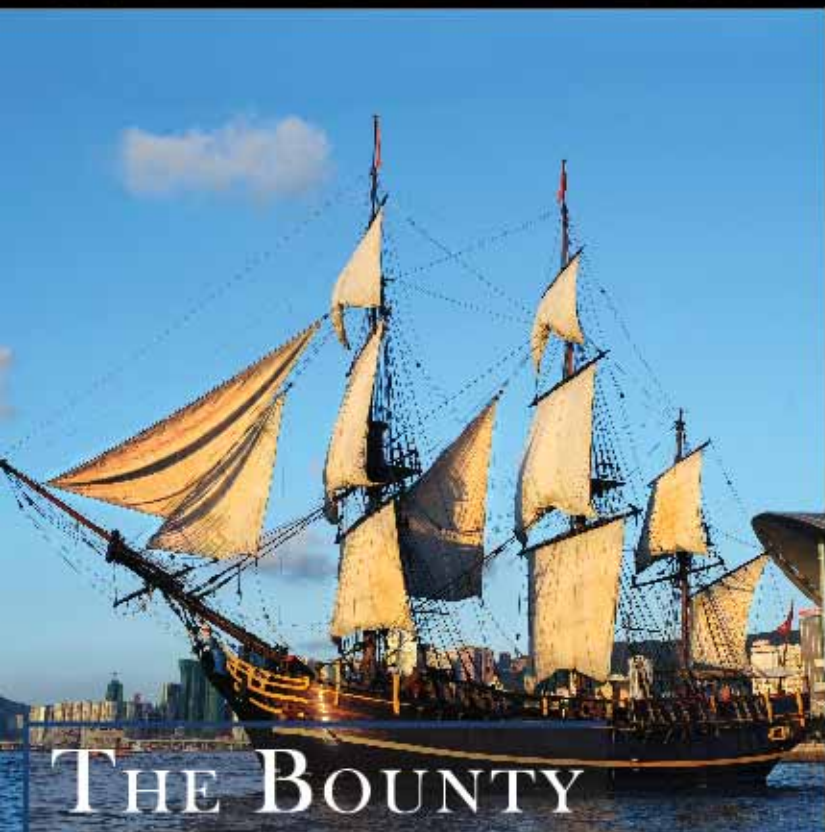

Chartered dreams on the Aqua Luna

Possibly the last hand-crafted wooden junk to be made in Hong Kong, the Aqua Luna represents the high-end of charter possibilities. With its rich history, lush Chinese-inspired furnishings and detailed wooden flourishes, there are few better ways to welcome VIPs to the city. The 140-square-metre space is divided into two decks: under cover and behind glass windows downstairs, and an upstairs, open-air deck with loungers.

Flexibility is the key to this junk's appeal—large groups can charter the entire boat for day trips to the scenic Aberdeen Harbour or seaside Stanley Village, while smaller groups can take part in one of the regular, scheduled journeys. The junk has a full bar and cocktail lounge, making it a perfect partner for exclusive private cruises and buffet dinners catered for by the highly-regarded aqua restaurant group.

THE BOUNTY

Sailing into the past on The Bounty

One of the last remaining tall ships in the world and unique to Hong Kong, The Bounty is a replica of the legendary British ship used in the 1983 movie about the famous mutiny. Since her move to Hong Kong, The Bounty has launched a new chapter in her history, offering relaxing cruises and adventurous team-building exercises. The boat's team-building challenge starts with participants being taught the basics of life onboard, handling of the rigging and sails, and finally climbing of the mast.

After completing the challenges of the team-building exercise, participants are rewarded with wonderful hospitality and achievement certificates. The Bounty's 42-metre deck is also an inspiring and creative venue for corporate meetings, trainings and themed galas.

Contemporary art curated in the historical pawn

Dating back to 1888, The Pawn is housed in one of Hong Kong's most historical buildings. What was once the famous Woo Cheong pawn shop became The Pawn in 2008 and re-opened in collaboration with British celebrity chef Tom Aikens after an extensive refurbishment, featuring modern British cuisine on the second floor 'Kitchen' and handcrafted cocktails and artisanal spirits on the first-floor 'Botanicals' bar. With a permanent art collection curated by well-known artist 'anothermountainman' (Stanley Wong) featuring some of Hong Kong's top contemporary artists, The Pawn has become more than just a dining space — it is a communal social venue for an eclectic mix of groups and sub-cultures, celebrating retro-futurism and arts and design through a casual-chic, al fresco and relaxed dining experience. One private room is available for lunch or dinner, seating up to 20 guests.

Luxurious industrialism at AMMO

AMMO is a multi-award winning restaurant located in the stunning heritage site of a former 19th century explosives compound. It specialises in handmade pasta freshly prepared in house every day using organic Italian eggs.
