

Celebrate Chinese New Year in Asia's World City

Chinese New Year is Hong Kong's biggest and most colourful festival of the year. A time where the locals give thanks for the last 12 months and pray for good fortune in the coming year. Chinese New Year is a great opportunity to see Hong Kong steeped in tradition. You can browse the festive markets with traditional foods and blooms on offer as well as photograph the red lanterns that adorn the city.

Hong Kongers celebrate the 15 days of New Year in both traditional and spectacular style. It is punctuated by the annual Cathay Pacific Night Parade due to take place on 8th February this year. Tens of thousands of revelers line the streets of Tsim Tsa Tshui to see the parade of floats with international and local performers turning the whole harbor front into a giant outdoor street party.

The Cathay Pacific Night Parade 2015 witnessed some 150,000 people packed into the streets to celebrate the year of the sheep and 2016 promises to see in the year of the monkey in equally spectacular style.
